Petrie-Crewes Nuptials.

A quiet but impressive ceremony took place on the evening of January the twenty-fifth, when Miss Mary K. Crewes became the bride of Mr. Lester Petrie. The nuptials were performed by Canon Ault in St. Andrew's Cathedral. The interior of this imposing edifice is so beautiful that floral decorations are almost superfluous. On Thursday evening, the altar and chancel rail were banked with white chrysanthemums and maiden hair ferns. Promptly at six o'clock the bridal party entered the church. The young bride looked unusually pretty in her bridal robe of white crepe de chine, fashioned over satin, with trimmings of silk fringe and tassels. A large and becoming white picture hat, trimmed in willow plumes was worn. Instead of the traditional shower bouquet of brides roses being carried, a handsome Prayer Book—that was the gift from an intimate friend was substituted. Miss Caroline Crewes, a sister of the bride was the maid of honor. This young girl wore a handsome gown of white, embroidered French marquisette, veiled over pink messaline. An exquisite white picture hat, with facings of pink satin and trimmed with a band of white ostrich feathers, completed the costume. The groom and his bestman, Mr. Charles Murray, met the bridal party at the altar, where Mr. H. P. Bertelman, gave the bride into the keeping of her future husband. Immediately after the ceremony, the happy young couple and the score of relatives and intimate friends that witnessed the ceremony, motored to the bride's former home, where a wedding supper was served. Prior to the supper an informal reception was held in the drawing room, when the young couple were showered with good wishes and congratulations. The drawing room was garlanded with tropical vines and white chrysanthemums. At seven o'clock, the bridal supper was served in the dining room. The color scheme in this room was in pink and green—pink being a favorite color of the bride's. The long table was covered with smilax, maiden hair ferns and pink carnations. In the center of the table was a mammoth wedding cake, decorated with white tulle and lilies of the valley. At the conclusion of the supper, the delicious cake was cut by Mrs. Lester Petrie. After supper, dancing was enjoyed until a late hour. Shortly before midnight, the young couple left for Kahala where a month's honeymoon is to be spent. As they left in the automobile they were showered with confetti and rice. On their return to town, Mr. and Mrs. Petrie will reside in Nuuanu Valley. Among those present at this happy event were: Mrs. Mary Crewes, Mr. and Mrs. H. P. Wood, Mr. and Mrs. Bert Petrie, Madam Petrie, Mr. and Mrs. H. F. Bertelman, the Misses Bertelman, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Smith, the Misses Smith, Mr. J. Clarke, Mr. Lemon, Mr. John Hughes, Mr. Garrett Hughes, Mr. Charles Murray, Mr. and Mrs. Mark Hardee, the Misses McCarriston (3), Mr. George McCarriston, Miss Taylor, the Misses Crewes, Mr. Clanton, Mr. Lambert and Mr. McKee and others.

Mr. C. W. Buck's Luncheon.

A luncheon of note was given Wednesday afternoon at the Moana Hotel by Mr. C. W. Buck, a millionaire of San Francisco. Mr. Buck is well known in Honolulu, having spent a number of winters in the islands. In November and December of 1910 he was a guest at the Moana and was especially enthusiastic about automobile-billing. He could be observed starting each morning and afternoon from the hotel in his large seven-seater "Packard" that he brought with him. Mr. Buck has been enjoying a trip around the world on the Cleveland. At his entertainment Wednesday, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Wall were the guests of honor. The luncheon table was adorned with dozens of long stemmed American Beauty roses. The luncheon favors for the women folk, were corsage bouquets, composed of the same variety of roses. After tiffin, the host and his party motored to Fort Ruger and the Pall, and visited several minor points of interest around town. Among those present were Mr. C. W. Buck, Mr. and Mrs. Henthill, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Wall, Miss Daisy Dietz and Mrs. A. H. Martin.

There was an important meeting last Saturday at the Promotion Committee, when a number of the society women who are taking an active interest in the coming Floral Parade, met to discuss their plans. Mrs. J. M. Dowsett is chairman of the committee. The women acting on this committee are taking an active interest in getting residents and visitors in Honolulu to decorate and enter their cars in the approaching Floral Parade. Director Arthur Wall is indeed fortunate in securing such an active committee. Among those who attended the Saturday's meeting were Mrs. J. M. Dowsett, Mrs. Helen Noonan, Mrs. Edward Julius Timberlake, Mrs. L. L. McCandless, Mrs. George Sherman, Mrs. A. J. Campbell, Mrs. Augustus Murphy, Mrs. Harry Lewis, Mrs. C. Montague Cooke and others. Mrs. Geo. Brown, daughter of Mrs. Robert Lishman, leaves for her home in New York after a most delightful three months in her island home on Tuesday's steamer, the good wishes of her many friends go with her.

Lieut. Comdr. Wurtsbaugh gave a very pleasant tea party on board the South Dakota last Sunday. The function was in honor of the ladies of the fleet who are stopping in the city.

Mrs. Wm. Robinson, wife of Judge Robinson, was a homecoming passenger in the Wilhelmina, after eight months visit to mainland cities.

Paymaster and Mrs. H. E. Stevens much to the regret of their many friends will leave Honolulu during the month of June.

Mr. and Mrs. A. G. M. Robertson are at home again after a very pleasant ten days spent at their Tantalus home.

Mr. and Mrs. F. W. Macfarlane, Sr. will be home on the 28th. Mr. Macfarlane is greatly improved in health.

Jesse Smith of Cleveland, O., was killed while operating an automobile at a speed of 60 miles an hour.

Actions must speak louder than words in order to make themselves heard above the hoisting.

A girl who is more ornamental than useful can at least keep some fool man from San Francisco. Mr. Buck is well guessing.

WIFE OF GREAT POET IS NOT AFRAID TO PREACH FREE LOVE

BOSTON, Mass., Jan. 7.—Mme. Maeterlinck, wife of the famous Belgian poet and playwright, spread the Leap Year Gospel of hope among the unmarried women of the universe yesterday by admitting that she proposed to her husband.

She admits, too, that her proposal frightened him by the impetuosity with which she declared her love.

Proposed at First Sight.

"I came across a book of Maurice Maeterlinck," she said, "and I was enraptured. I read and re-read it and then I declared, 'He is mine; he is mine; my husband; my love; the only love I have ever known. I shall meet him. I shall love him, he must love me.' A party was given and I was invited. There I saw Maeterlinck. I shrieked out: I ran wildly toward him. He was afraid of me. He feared me."

"My man, my man, you are mine," I said, and I took his hand.

"He was awed, overcome with my audacity, as he thought it to be. He was wonderful, but so shy, so diffident."

"Finally he became interested in me. He asked me pertinent questions about myself, my life, and I told him all. I told him of my nature, my views on marriage. He listened in his queer, birdlike way. I was interesting, he acknowledged, and new in his experience. I said, 'You doubt me? Leave me and I shall make you believe in me.'"

"We parted, but love still lingered in my heart. Every day for three months I wrote to Maeterlinck and told him my every thought. I never saw him nor would I see him."

"At last, after three months, he came to me and we have loved for all time."

Talks in Dressing-Room.

Thus Mme. Maeterlinck for the first time told the wonderful story of her love for the poet. She was sitting in her dressing room at the Boston Opera House after the dress rehearsal of "Pelleas and Melisande," which De Bussy founded on the work of her husband and in which she is to appear as Pelleas.

She admitted that she had made the Belgian poet love her. How then was she able to hold his love, to maintain their blissful, ideal domestic state that has become so well known to the world as the poet's works?

"To hold a man's love," was the reply, "I can only say I never try to hold it. The moment a woman thinks any tie or bond, or earthly vow or law can keep her sweetheart always hers, that moment she has lost him."

"Marriage is a convenience of society, but it has nothing to do with anything affecting love other than uniting two individuals who are in love or profess themselves to be."

"Society, clothes, the stage, a voice. Ah, what do they mean at last? With love all is possible to a woman; without it she is worthless."

"And, speaking of children, madam, do you regret that you have none?"

Husband Overgrown Baby.

"I have a baby," she added. "The only baby I have ever loved for and ever shall have—my husband. He is a big, overgrown baby, as every splendid man is. The greater the intelligence of a man, the more of a child he is in some moods."

Of woman's suffrage Mme. Maeterlinck said:

"I believe that a woman should have the same privileges as a man. If she wants to vote why can't she give it? If she aspires to a free moral code why can't it hers? There is a new era opening up for woman. She is more and more finding her place and will become a better wife for being a more unimpaired human being."

Mme. Maeterlinck is a law unto herself. She believes in originality.

"I have never dressed in the mode," she said, "because I detest the mode. It only accentuates the stupidity of women."

"My religion," she concluded, "is to live up to what I believe is right. I may have been wrong many times in others' eyes, but I have only myself to give me standards. No other human being has a right to dictate standards to other intelligent human beings."

PHILIPPINE CARNIVAL NOTABLE

The carnival which, under the management of a private association, has been held in Manila for a week of every February for the past three years, will, on its next opening, be changed in one important respect. Hitherto it has included, besides the amusements and pageants which are more generally associated with the word "carnival," an excellent industrial department, to which exhibits illustrative of the resources of the islands and their development were contributed by the government, the provinces, and by business houses. It came to be felt, however, that more systematic and extensive promotion work could be done along these lines by making this part of the carnival a matter of public concern; and, with this end in view, the Philippine legislature, during the session of 1910-11, appropriated the sum of $25,000 for an exposition of local products and resources to be held in connection with the carnival of 1912 and on adjoining grounds. A board was later appointed to work out the project; and the resulting plans are now well advanced.

The exposition will be held from February 3 to 10, 1912, both dates inclusive, on a part of the grounds wholly occupied in former years by the carnival. This tract, known as Wallace Field, is situated just south of the old walled city, has ample street car connections with the business district, and is but a few minutes from the new docks and directly opposite the new and luxurious Manila Hotel. Admission to the grounds will be entirely free.

Wide Character of Displays.
A number of large buildings will be erected—four for the exhibits to be sent in by the provinces, one for those of the bureau of the insular government, one for educational work, a machinery hall, and suitable quarters for the live-stock exhibits.

The agricultural, industrial, and commercial exhibits from the provinces are expected to be particularly comprehensive and important. Nearly all the provinces will participate; and all that do have been requested to prepare folders descriptive of the population, resources, and natural attractions of their portions of the islands for distribution to visitors and prospective tourists and investors. In these exhibits, of course, the staple agricultural products of the islands will be particularly in evidence—chiefly sugar, copra, abaca (Manila hemp), tobacco, corn and rice—but many minor products of potential or growing commercial importance will in this way be brought to the attention of purchasers. Among the most important of these latter are the native textiles, pinas, jute, and sinawaya, manufactures exclusively or in combination of pineapple, abaca and silk; many varieties of native hats, mats and baskets; and shell goods. Most of these, particularly the pinas, jute, and the hats, have already found an extensive market in the United States. With the efforts now being made through the medium of the schools to standardize and systematize production, the importance of this branch of the export trade is rapidly growing. Wherever possible at the exposition every step of the various industries will be demonstrated on the ground.

SHE USES HONOLULU IN SMUGGLING

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 17.—Mrs. Elizabeth L. Boydston called upon Customs Collector Stratton yesterday with an attorney for the purpose of devising a plan to escape the consequences of what the customs authorities believe to be an attempt to smuggle $1500 worth of jewelry into this port.

When the Mongolia arrived last Saturday from the Orient Mrs. Boydston was on board, a through passenger from Kobe, Japan, to San Francisco. At Honolulu the customs people were informed that she went ashore wearing her diamonds and emeralds and that she left them at Wells, Fargo & Company's office at that port with directions to have them shipped to her in care of the Hibernia bank in this city. The fact that the lady was bare of the usual ornaments when she arrived awakened suspicion in the customs men, and they learned from persons on the steamer of the express office episode.

Inspector Joseph Head was ordered to go to the bank and take possession of the jewels, which he did, and now the lady runs the risk of losing her property and of being fined thrice the value of the goods, or $4500.

If the jewels were bought at Honolulu or if they were taken by the lady from this country when she went abroad they would have been entered free of duty, but the fact that she used the express company as the vehicle to land the jewels here surreptitiously will go hard against her with the Secretary of the Treasury, to whom the matter has been referred.

The following is a list of the articles seized: One solitaire diamond ring, one emerald ring with two diamonds, one gold ring with diamonds, one emerald ring center stone missing; one gold watch set with diamonds, one jade necklace, one jade bracelet, one pair jade earrings, one jade brooch, pin, one small piece of jade.
